Preoperative staging of patients with metastatic rectal cancer is still a clinical challenge. The aim of the study was to assess the utility of 18F-fluorodeoxyglucose (FDG) positron emission tomography (PET)/CT in patients with occult nodal metastases and to compare its accuracy with the previously validated NCCN and AJCC staging systems. Retrospective analysis of 98 consecutive patients who underwent preoperative FDG PET/CT before resection of locally advanced and/or recurrent rectal cancer. Uni- or bivariate correlation analyses were performed between the various staging systems and FDG PET/CT results. Three-site lymph node dissection was performed in 67 patients (67%). Nodal metastases were diagnosed in 12 patients (12%) on FDG PET/CT, of these, 10 patients (83%) had occult metastases. In four cases (33%), FDG PET/CT suggested the presence of isolated nodal metastases. No significant correlation was found between any of the staging systems and PET/CT results. In a patient with occult nodal metastasis, preoperative FDG PET/CT results were concordant with pathological (LN) findings in five patients. This study showed that preoperative FDG PET/CT is accurate in patients with occult nodal metastases and allows for improved patient stratification into prognostic and therapeutic decision-making pathways.I was up late last night chatting with a friend whose daughter was in a match this morning and f678ea9f9e
